

10 places for great Asian cuisine in Las Vegas

Las Vegas has a large mix of Asian restaurants that serve a variety of cuisine from Chinese and Japanese to Thai and Korean. No matter what you're looking for, whether it be classic Asian dishes or something more exotic, you'll find it in these resort restaurants:

Kumi, Mandalay Bay: Award-winning chef Akira Back serves modern Japanese cuisine with a Korean American twist at Kumi. Start out with either a cool or warm shared plate with items like shishito peppers, Kobe tataki, miso black cod and more. Entrees include options such as Jidori chicken, a teriyaki grilled salmon and a toban filet with mixed mushrooms and Nanbanzu soy. The restaurant also has a sushi bar and a lunch menu featuring bento boxes.

Koi

Koi, Planet Hollywood: This Japanese restaurant was a hot spot in New York and L.A. before landing in Vegas. The menu features traditional sushi and sashimi and a variety of specialty rolls. Cooked dishes include sautéed tiger prawns, steamed Chilean sea bass, Kobe-style sirloin and roasted duck breast.

Yellowtail, Bellagio: Chef Akira Back offers modern Japanese creations at Yellowtail. Be sure to try the big eye tuna pizza, served with micro shiso and truffle oil. Other menu items include lobster carpaccio, shikoku octopus and duck prosciutto. Save room for assorted mochi or the green tea mousse cake for dessert.
