

Where to eat on Valentine's Day

Grace Bascos, Special for USA TODAY 12:19 p.m. EST February 6, 2014

SHARE

CONNECT

TWEET

COMMENT

EMAIL

MORE

Sure, the other 364 days of the year are just as good to take your sweetie out to dinner, but spending Valentine's Day in Las Vegas calls for something special. Fortunately, just about every restaurant in Las Vegas is here to help you out, whether you'd like to impress your significant other with a spectacular meal or a simple quiet night out for two. Just remember, February 14 is one of the biggest dining out nights, and also happens to fall on a Friday this year, so plan ahead and make reservations.

Kumi at Mandalay Bay

Chef Akira Back is best known for his modern Japanese cuisine with Korean influences, so a Valentine's Day meal at Kumi is perfect for adventurous diners who want a meal that's as flavorful as their love lives. Kumi's menu includes some of Chef Back's signature dishes such as a starter of kanpachi and butter poached lobster. Don't overlook the aphrodisiac properties of oysters with orange ponzu and masago, and strawberry shortcake is simply a cute way to finish the meal. $150 for two, 702-693-8300, kumilasvegas.com